Glassette
Wall art scaled for Healthcare

Skyline Design
Skyline Design is proud to introduce Glassette, a line of its most popular designs, images, and patterns curated specifically for the needs and aesthetics of healing environments.

Drawn from Skyline Design’s award-winning Digital Glass Portfolio, Glassette features the work of Alexander Girard, Henry Domke, Scholten and Baijings, Bonnie Edelman, Kelly Harris Smith, Steven Meyers and many other designers, photographers, and artists.
Healthcare environments are filled with unique and specific challenges. Art and décor created for these environments must be soothing and restorative for both patients and providers, and must be easy to clean and resistant to infection.

Glassette meets these challenges. The creative and elegant designs for which Skyline Design is known have proven benefits in healthcare environments, and glass as a material is non-porous, durable, easy to clean and disinfect in place, and cost effective for both large and small facilities.
Henry Domke

Henry Domke is a photographer and physician who creates nature art for hospitals and clinics. His greatest satisfaction comes from adding a healing tone for patients, staff, and visitors in healthcare settings throughout the country.
Bonnie Edelman

In her body of work titled SCAPES (Land, Sea, Sky), Bonnie Edelman used a slow shutter speed and motion to create blurred, prismatic versions of the landscapes she encountered on her travels.
Steven Meyers

As a radiology technologist, Steven Meyers spent a lot of time experimenting with an art form that used x-rays instead of light. A traditional landscape photographer, Meyers found many challenges in this alternative technique that exposed the delicate textures and structures in nature.
Alexander Girard

Alexander Girard created more than 300 designs for Herman Miller during his 20-year tenure as director of the Herman Miller Fabric Division.
Susan Hable Smith

Susan Hable Smith has always drawn inspiration from her immediate surroundings, creating an aesthetic that illuminates nature and its composite elements of line, space, and color.
Kelly Harris Smith is a designer and creative director specializing in natural and sustainable materials for commercial and residential interior design. Her award-winning designs are distinctive for their pattern, color, and innovative functionality.
Scholten & Baijings

The Dutch design duo of Stefan Scholten and Carole Baijings brings a striking sense of color to their functional yet exquisitely crafted objects.
Skyline Design offers Glassette in frameless panels that come in five standard sizes, which can be installed singly or in multiples.
